WHAT WE'RE READING

WAL-MART, CARSAVER WILL SELL CARS

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the nation's largest retailer, is jumping into car sales through a partnership with CarSaver, an online automotive retail platform. CarSaver, in turn, is setting up partnerships with dealership groups, including AutoNation Inc., the nation's largest new-vehicle retailer. CarSaver will launch the program April 1 at select Wal-Mart Supercenters in four markets: Houston, Dallas, Phoenix and Oklahoma City. CarSaver's digital platform allows car shoppers to select, finance and insure a vehicle through its website or on a touch-screen kiosk, backed by bilingual auto advisers available by phone. Staffers at CarSaver Centers -- set up inside Wal-Mart stores across from checkout lanes and alongside other services, such as vision centers and nail salons -- will explain the car-buying program to Wal-Mart customers.

AMAZON'S NEXT FRONTIER TO CONQUER? AUTO PARTS

Amazon boss Jeff Bezos, whose online behemoth is likely to become the country's No. 1 apparel retailer this year, is setting his sights on what could be his next sector to dominate: the $50 billion do-it-yourself aftermarket auto parts business. In recent months, Amazon has struck contracts with the largest parts makers in the country -- including Robert Bosch, Federal-Mogul, Dorman Products and Cardone Industries, sources told The Post.

UBER PARTNERS WITH DAIMLER IN A STEP TOWARD A DRIVERLESS FUTURE

Uber is one step closer to its dream of a self-driving future, with a little help from a new partner. The ride-hailing company announced this past month a partnership with Daimler, under which the German automaker plans to build autonomous vehicles that will operate on Uber's transportation network. The move marks the first time a major automaker will provide its own self-driving vehicles, built entirely in-house without Uber's help, specifically to operate on the ride-hailing company's network.

FORD TAPS INTO $500 BILLION AUTO PARTS MARKET

Despite the fact that many automakers sold more new cars in 2016 than they ever had before, the average age of vehicles in the US is still increasing as reliability goes up. What this means, though, is that the auto parts segment is just as red hot as the new car market, amounting to what Reuters claims is a $500 billion market worldwide. As of now, it's only expected to grow, and to capitalize on this booming market, Ford has just announced that it's now in the business of selling car parts.

HOW CONNECTIVITY IS SHAPING A NEW AUTO INDUSTRY

The automotive industry is quickly transitioning from infotainment to transformative technologies that will enable Mobility as a Service to spring to life. Third-party platforms like CarPlay and Android Auto are beginning to emerge as OEMs explore the benefits of ADAS (Advanced Driver Assistance Systems), V2V (Vehicle-to-Vehicle Communications), 5G connectivity, AI (Artificial Intelligence), AR (Augmented Reality), driverless vehicles, electrification, and IoT (Internet of Things). OEMs are focusing on car-to-cloud vehicle sensor data crowdsourcing for traffic, parking, weather and map services and cloud-to-car over-the-air updates for life cycle and cyber security management. Commercial vehicle technology is also evolving from aftermarket fleet telematics to embedded connectivity, active safety and ADAS, platooning and ultimately, autonomous trucks.
